

GAY FOREIGN LIFE IN CHINA

What Goes On at the Little Island of Shameen.

CANTON FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Sport and Work of the Cosmopolitan Foreign Residents.

A City Without Shops or Streets—Spacious European Residences—Recreation Grounds—Splendid Racing and How the Chinamen Enjoy It.

Life in China is as cosmopolitan. The large business houses or "hongs," are English, German and French. In Canton, where there exists a typical foreign colony—the last American house disappeared with Messrs. Russell & Co., who ceased to exist a year ago.

The English, French, German, Portuguese and United States governments are represented by consulates of the first order. Other governments, such as Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden are represented by vice-consuls.

One's social intercourse, therefore, is in constant touch with Englishmen, Frenchmen, Americans, Germans, etc., who have met together upon common ground as merchants, consuls, customs officials, naval officers, etc.

In speaking of meeting upon common ground, the phrase, though figuratively true, is not strictly accurate in reality. The little island of Shameen, where foreigners reside, is a concession to the Chinese government to the British and French governments only. Great Britain possesses four-fifths and France the other fifth.

The Shameen police, who are Chinese, and under the management of a very efficient Swede, the chief of police, watch the island by night and day, and prevent disorderly persons entering the island. At night every Chinaman must carry a small lantern or light of some sort.

Shameen is a small city without shops or streets. Most of the daily necessities of foreigners are on the English concession, the French concession having been but lately sold for business purposes. On both concessions the Chinese are not allowed to enter, but a ninety-nine years' leasehold right, which can be renewed on certain conditions when the ninety-nine years expire.

The European residences on Shameen are spacious and elegant. They are built in the Italian style of architecture and remind one of the stately residences of the world. In his "Travels Round the World," mentions so long as twenty years ago the "princely house of Russell & Co." From the Chinese point of view, the mental work is all done by men, the women, or "amahs," as they are called, serving only as maids, nurses to children, or as seamstresses.

Broad, exquisitely kept reaches of lawn interspersed with right angles, lined with a double row of banyan and other tropical shade trees, under which stretch broad asphalt promenades, always kept in perfect order. Around the island is another magnificently broad Chinese walk, lined also with banyan trees. This walk is commonly called the "Bund." It is here one takes his daily promenades and meets his friends. Laid the Chinese walk of the Bund is another wide, sandy beach. On this walk revel the children with their attractive amahs.

Notwithstanding the tropical heat of summer children do not grow or grow emaciated, as one might suppose. It is in the early morning up to 11, and in the afternoon after 4 o'clock that the Chinese walk of the Bund is another wide, sandy beach. On this walk revel the children with their attractive amahs.

The fire brigade is composed of the Shameen force of the colony, who turn out invariably to assist in the fire department of red shirts, dark blue trousers, and with helmets which came from New York, and are the same as those worn by the New York Fire Brigade. In gait on the front.

As there are no horses on Shameen, coolies are needed to haul the engine, which is guided by regular members of the brigade. On more than one occasion the Shameen Fire brigade has rendered invaluable assistance to the Chinese in Canton.

Besides the Lawn Tennis club there is the Cricket club, which has the use of the unoccupied portion of the French concession, and the Canton Rowing club. During the regatta week is great sport in Hong Kong. It lasts for three days, during which time all business is suspended in the afternoon, those who do not own launches from which to view and follow up the races, betake themselves to a hulk fitted up as a hotel, restaurant, etc., and known as the "judges' stand," which serves also as the judges' stand.

Everyone turns out to see the races—concooning, sculling, fours, eights and sailing.

While mentioning sports in Hong Kong one should not omit to say a few words about race week, which occurs in February—the most beautiful month of the year.

Besides the grand stands, all the principal horse put up bamboo pavilions, which are with each other in the magnificence of their lobbies. During race week champagne is served in the pavilions, not in ordinary bottles, but in magnums, and the ladies of the house enter into friendly rivalry also in making their respective pavilions attractive to the opposite sex.

Spirited racing is the order of the day. There is no corruption here. The "jockeys" ("jockies" as they are called) are the only place gentlemen. Even those represented by his favorite wags, who for months have been training their ponies for these exciting days.

If one of Russell's or Jardine's young men, or it may be a wealthy member of the house of Sassoon, or Chamber or Billions win a race, his friends are to be seen on their shoulders to his pavilion, where congratulations are hearty, and the flowing bowl not far distant. On this day it is permitted to lose all the money one wants, without being disturbed as to where it is to come from.

"Talapa" and junior clerks exchange confidences as to what horse next to back. Your comrade meets all your I. O. U.'s at the end of the month, simply scribbles the name of the horse on a slip of paper, and wishing for you that next year you "catches better chances."

It is a week of hilarity. Shanghai, Foochow and Amoy send their favorite sons to show the Hong Kong jockies how racing should be done, but take back with them a few tips about racing worth knowing.

All Canton manages to get to the races for at least two days, besides taking a ticket or two for the three days racing in the Canton stadium.

Besides the lawn tennis, cricket and boat clubs, there is the Canton club itself, where one goes for a game of billiards or to read the papers. The Canton club like all eastern clubs is splendidly equipped for making its members comfortable. The library, reading, card, billiard and refreshment rooms are perfect in their appointments.

The service is entirely Chinese, with the exception of the paid secretary who is Portuguese. Hong Kong can boast no better club. Our club doors are always open to visitors who have the freedom of the club for three months before being required to join.

Everyone feels it his duty to support the various athletic associations, as well as the club, with a result that all thrive a mercurially.

It is a custom that the bachelors of the club give at least three balls yearly, the first one coming before the New Year, the second New Year's eve and the third about the end of February. Music for these events is brought from Hong Kong.

Even though these balls come in the winter, the demand on the terrace opens all the doors leading on to the verandas. The verandas themselves are enclosed by Chinese mats and made into a

Many years ago it was customary to give a ball whenever eight ladies could be gotten together. At present there is never any such difficulty. There is always a number of ladies up from Hong Kong, besides the regular contingent of dancing ladies residents of Shameen, who can be counted on for a number of dances.

Beside the bachelor balls, there are several others each winter given by the various hongs, by the English, French and Chinese consuls. (Our consul is too poor to entertain in this way, so contents himself with a few modest dinners in the fulfillment of his social duties, and generally by the commissioner of custom.)

At the bachelor's New Year's ball the incoming year is celebrated by the letting off of thousands of fire crackers, made in the shape of cracker boxes, and exploding crackers being hung in festoons on the branches of trees surrounding the house. At exactly 12 the din of exploding crackers begins. Bumpers of champagne accompany this truly oriental greeting of the dawn of the New Year.

Besides balls, banquets, lawn tennis and race week festivities in Hong Kong, we find enjoyment by taking holiday and Sunday trips up the river. Steam launches are numerous and reasonably so long ago of greater commercial importance than Hong Kong, is on a peninsula. It enjoys pleasant breezes, an excellent beach and bathing facilities, and is especially noted at the present time for its fashionable ladies, which are extensively patronized by foreigners. Macao deserves besides all this, special mention for the inestimable boon it has been to the whole of China and Japan in furnishing an excellent class of Portuguese clerks, who do most of the clerical work in business houses. They are famous for accuracy and penmanship. The settlement still clings to its mother tongue, but has long since ceased to be of pure race owing to intermarriages with Chinese.

The Macao Portuguese hold an anomalous position. They do not associate to any extent with the Chinese or with other foreigners. They are well paid for their excellent service, but are never invited to participate in our pleasures. They are for the most part of insignificant build. At Macao, however, they are at home, and consider themselves aristocratic in the extreme.

A Hong Kong lady in it is an enchanted place. It enjoys pleasant breezes, an excellent beach and bathing facilities, and is especially noted at the present time for its fashionable ladies, which are extensively patronized by foreigners. Probably more income is burned before ladies in China than in any other country on the globe. In a place where a lady quarters her waiters, where all masculinity bows down to her slightest word, and where the husband is fought for almost tooth and nail, paradise, from a feminine point of view, is not far distant.

Last of all, Canton is one of the few places in the world where one is free to meet his friends in a room or later. As the old custodian of Shakespeare's house once said to me: "All the world comes to us." No one goes around the world without stopping at Canton. Other ports may be passed by, but Canton is always on the traveler's list, be he an ex-patriate, merchant, prince, duke or ordinary globe-trotter.

The latch-string to the door of Canton's hospitable hongs is always out to them all. SHERIDAN P. READ.

Made Him Doubt of Omnipotence.

A little boy, son of the most exemplary parents, wanted a bicycle, and kept the matter constantly before the consideration of the family purchasing agent. His mother told him to pray for the desired gift, and that night a petition was sent up in the most perfect manner of childish prayer. While the little fellow slept a tri-cycle was smuggled into his room and placed beside his bed. In the morning the father and mother were awakened with a start by the sound of the little boy's bicycle wheels.

He rolled over, fastened his staring blue eyes upon the miraculous appearance, and exclaimed in a hoarse voice: "Dood gracious, Mr. Dad, don't you know the difference 'tween a bicycle and a tri-cycle yet?"—Boston Transcript.

A Satisfied Patron.

A grimy tramp came up to Passenger

Agent Dowling of the Burlington yesterday and asked, "Are you paying for fares?" "Not yet. What have you done?" "Well, I've rode all the way in from Denver on a brake beam of one of your passenger cars, and for a ticket to Chicago I'll give you an affidavit of the smoothness of your track and the photograph of a Bittern cured him."

He didn't get it.—Omaha World-Herald.

The Evolution.

Of medicinal agents is gradually relegating the old-time herbs, pills, draughts and vegetable extracts to the rear and bringing into general use the pleasant and effective liquid remedies of Syrup of Figs. Specimen Cases.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was treated with Neurine and Rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in weight. Three bottles of Neurine Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Neurine Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Spenser, Cetawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle of Electric Bitters and one box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold at A. C. Smith & Co.'s Drug Store.
